Jackson Lamb PhD

London, UK | jackson.lamb@example.com | sloughhouse.example.com | github.com/jackson-lamb-example

October 30, 2026
Hiring Team

Dear Hiring Team,

I am applying for the advertised position at your organization. I am a senior intelligence officer who has spent the last decade running Slough House, the MI5 department where careers are sent to be quietly forgotten. My job there is to notice what other people miss, which turns out to be most things.

My work turns messy, incomplete information into decisions someone has to act on by morning. I pull records from systems nobody else remembers the passwords to, cross-check them in SQL and Python, and build analyses in R that survive a hostile briefing. Along the way I have learned to explain risk to senior people who would rather not hear it, and to do it in under a minute.

I am drawn to your organization because the role puts analysis close to the decisions that matter. I would bring a habit of assuming the data is lying until proven otherwise, a low tolerance for dashboards nobody reads, and decades of practice spotting the one detail that does not fit.

Thank you for your time and consideration. My résumé is attached. I am available for interview at short notice, provided the interview is not before ten.

Sincerely,

Jackson Lamb